

Skunk Cabbage Walk 2009

February 22

This year's skunk cabbage walk was our first event in the new Educational Center. This allowed Eric to begin the walk with a real classroom presentation on Skunk Cabbage. It was awesome.

The handful of folks that came got a real treat with getting a first glimpse of the building and classroom teachings before the walk. And the skunk cabbage were out – we just didn't get to see any of them open.s

Eric showed everyone how even in the cold and snow you can sink into the muck in the Bog.

Looking for Skunk
Cabbage in the Swamp woods. We found one.
They aren't open yet –
but they are peeking
through the snow.

Then Eric showed the piezometer and didn't fall into the creek.

The water was up in it –
it was also frozen.

We also saw some of the first hepatica leaves poking through the snow.

And at the end we had a warm building to go into and drink hot chocolate and talk about what a wonderful walk it was.
